TRUST IN GOD.

BY MAY MORRIS.

"Though he slay me, yet will I serve him."

JOB XXI. 15.

If sorrow comes, and o'er thy brow
In furrows deep her image planneth;
Or melancholy's voice so sad,
Its solemn song, so solemn chaneth,
As to renew thy soul in thee,
"Trust me!"

By death, of some dear friend bereft,
Most desolate thy home is made—
One promise unto thee is left,
(On God may then thy heart be stayed)
He'll not forsake—but calleth thee,—
"Trust me!"

"Not willingly doth He afflict!"
'Tis for thy good, these trials come,
To wean thee from this earth so dear,
And nearer draw to heaven—thy home—
Tho' dark, mysterious, oft they be,—
"Trust me!"

Thus, one by one, each tie is riven,
And youth's bright dream of life o'ercast;
But Faith new life to thee hath given,
And brightly shadoweth o'er the past!
Heaven's carrier-dove hath brought to thee,—
"Trust me!"

Then e'er to God in humble prayer,
'Till life shall end, thy voice be raised!
God heareth—he is every where!
With grateful heart let Him be praised,— Suffer—be strong! He saith to thee,—
"Trust me!"

"Prayer is Innocent's friend; and willingly
I'll be incessant
'Twixt the earth and sky, the carrier-pigeon of heaven."
[Longfellow's "Children of the Lord's Supper."]

RECIPE FOR POTATOE PUDDING.

The author of the "Widow Bedolt" papers furnishes an article for the Saturday Gazette, from which we extract the following ninth-proving recipe for a potatoe pudding. Mrs. Mudlaw, we will premise, is the cook of Mrs. Philpot, wife of the candidate for Congress, and Mrs. Darling is the wife of a worthy mechanic, whose vote Col. Philpot is ambitious to obtain. Mrs. Darling calls upon Mrs. Philpot, and the latter introduces her to Mrs. Mudlaw, her cook, when the following conversation takes place:

Miss Philpot says you want to get my receipt for potatoe pudding?
'Yes,' replied Mrs. Darling, 'I would be obliged to you for the directions,' and she took out of her pocket a pencil and paper to write it down.

'Well, 'tis an excellent pudden,' said Mudlaw, complacently; 'for my part, I like it about as well as any pudden I make, and that's saying a good deal, I can tell you, for I understand makin' a great variety. 'Taint so awful rich as some, to be sure. Now there's the Cardinelle pudden, and the Washington pudden, and the Lay Fayette pudden, and the—'
'Yes Mrs. Darling liked it very much—how do you make it?'
'Wal, I peel my potatoes and bile em in fair water. I always let the water bile before I put em in. Some folks let their potatoes lie and sog in the water ever so long, before it biles; but I think it spiles em. I always make it a pint to have the water bile—'
'How many potatoes?'
'Wal, I always take about as many potatoes as I think I shall want. I'm generally governed by the size of the pudden I want to make. If it's a large pudden, why I take quite a number; but if it's a small one, why, then I don't take as many. As quick as they're done, I take em up and smash em as fine as I can get em. I'm always very particular about that—some folks ain't, they'll let their potatoes be full o' lumps. I never do, if there's any thing I hate, it's lumps in puddens. I wout have em. Whether I'm smashing potatoes for puddens or for vegetable use, I smash it till there aint the size of a lump in it. If I cant get it fine without sifting, why I sift it. Once in a while, when I'm otherways engaged, I set the girl to mash on't. Wal, she'll give it three or four jans, and come along. 'Miss Mudlaw, is the potatoe fine enough?' Jupiter Rammin! that's the time I come as near gittin' mad as I ever allow myself to come, for I make it a pint never to have lumps—'

'Yes, I know it is very important. What next?'
'Wal, then I put in my butter, in winter time I melt it a little, not enough to make it fly, but just so's to soften it.'
'How much butter does it require?'
'Wal, I always take butter accordin' to the size of the pudden; a large pudden needs a good sized lump o' butter, but not too much. And I'm always particular to have my butter fresh and sweet. Some folks think it's no matter what sort o' butter they use for cookin, but I don't. Of all things I do despise strong, frowy, rancid butter. For pity's sake have your butter fresh—'
'How much butter did you say?'
'Wal, that depends, as I said before, on what sized pudden you want to make. And another thing that regulates the quantity of butter I use is the 'moant o' cream I take. I always put in more or less cream; when I have abundance o' cream I put in considerable, and when it's scarce, why, I use more butter than I otherways should. But you must be particular not to get in too much cream. There's a great deal in having jest the right quantity; and so 'tis with all the ingreijences. There aint a better pudden in the world than a potatoe pudden when it's made right, but taint every body that makes em right. I rememb' when I lived in Tuckertown, I was a visitin' to Squire Humphrey's one time, I went in the first company in 'Tuckertown—dear me! this is a changeable world. Wal, they had what they called a potatoe pudden for dinner. Good land! Of all the puddens! I've often occurred to that pudden since, and wondered what the Squire's wife was a thinkin' of when she made it. I wout be obliged to do such things in them days, and didn't know how to do any thing as well as I do now. Necessity's the mother of invention—experience is the best teacher after all—'
'Do you sweeten it?'
'O, yes, to be sure it needs sugar, the best o' sugar, too, not this wet, soggy, brown sugar. Some folks never think o' usin' good sugar to cook with, but for my part I wout have no other—'
'How much sugar do you take?'
'Wal, that depends altogether on whether you calculate to have saas for it—some like saas, you know, and then some again dont. So, when I calculate for saas, I dont take so much sugar; and when I dont calculate for saas, I make it sweet enough to eat without saas. Poor Mr. Mudlaw was a great hand for pudden saas. I always made it for him—good, rich, saas, too. I could afford to have things rich before he was unfortunate in business. (Mudlaw went to State's prison for horse-stealing.) I like saas myself, too; and the Carmel and the children are all great saas hands; and so I generally calculate for saas, though Miss Philpot prefers the pudden without saas, and perhaps you'd prefer it without. If so, you must put in sugar accordin'ly. I always make it a pint to have em sweet enough when they're to be eat without saas—'
'And don't you use eggs?'
'Certainly, eggs is one o' the principal ingreijences—'
'How many does it require?'
'Wal, when eggs is plenty, I always use plenty; and when they're scarce, why I can do with less, though I'd rather have enough; and be sure to beat 'em well. It does distress me the way some folks beat eggs. I always want to have em thoroughly beat for everything I use em in. It tries my patience most awfully to have any body round me that wout beat eggs enough. A spell ago we had a darkey to help in the kitchen. One day I was a makin' sponge cake, and having occasion to go up stairs after something, I sot her to beatin' eggs. Wal, what do you think the critter done! Why, she whisked em round a few times, and turned em right into the other ingreijences, that I'd got weighed out. When I come back and saw what she'd done, my gracious! I came as nigh to losin' my temper as I ever allow myself to come. 'Twas awful provokin'! I always want the kitchen help to do things as I want to have em done. But I never saw a darkey yet that ever done anything right. They're a lazy, slaughterin' set. To think of her spillin' that cake so, when I'd told her over and over that I always made it a pint to have my eggs thoroughly beat—'
'Yes, it was too bad. Do you use fruit in the pudding?'
'Wal, that's jest as you please. You'd better be governed by your own judgment as to that. Some like currants and some like raisins, and then agin some don't like narry one. If you use raisins, for pity's sake pick out the stuns. It's awful to have a body's teeth come grindin' out a raisin stun. I'd rather have my ears boxt any time—'
'How many raisins must I take?'
'Wal, not too many—its apt to make the pudden too heavy, you know; and when it's heavy, it aint so light and good. I'm a great hand—'
'Yes. What do you use for flavorin'?'
'There agin you'll have to exercise your own judgment. Some like one thing, and some another, you know. If you go the hull figger on temperance, why some other kind o' flavorin' 'll do as wine or bandy, I spose. But whatever you make up your mind to use, be particular to git in a sufficiency, or else your pudden 'll be flat. I always make it a pint—'
'How long must it bake?'
'There's the great thing, after all. The bakin' is the main pint. A potatoe pudden, of all puddens has got to be baked jest right. For if it bakes a leetle too much, its apt to dry it up; and then agin if it don't bake quite enough, its sure to taste potatoe—and that spiles it, you know—'
'How long, should you think?'
'Wal, that depends a good deal on the heat of your oven. If you have a very hot oven, t'wont do to leave it too long, and if your oven aint so very hot why you'll be necessitated to leave it in longer—'
'Well, how can I tell anything about it?'
'Why, I always let em bake till I think they're done—that's the safest way. I make it a pint to have em baked exactly right. It's very important in all kinds o' bake, pies, bread, puddens, and every thing—to have em baked precisely long enough, and jest right. Some folks don't seem to have no system at all about their bakin. One time they'll burn their bread to a crisp, and then agin it'll be so slack tain't fit to eat. Nothing hurts my feelings so much as to see things overdone or slack-baked. Here only tother day, Lorry, the girl that Miss Philpot dismissed yesterday, come within an ace of lettin' my bread burn up. My back was turned a minute, and what should she do but go to stuffin' wood into the stove at the awfallest rate. If I had't a found it out just when I did, my bread wout have been split as sure as I'm a live woman. Jupiter Rammin! I was about as much decomposed as I ever allow myself to git! I told Miss Philpot I wout 'nt stan it no longer—one of us must quit—either Lorry or me must walk—'
'So you've no rule about making this pudding?'
'No rule!' said Mudlaw, with a look of intense surprise.
'Yes,' said Mrs. Darling, 'you seem to have no rule for anything about it.'
'No rule!' screamed the indignant cook, starting up, while her red face grew ten times redder, and her little black eyes snapped with rage. 'No rule!' and she planted herself in front of Mrs. Darling, erecting her fleshy figure to its full height of majestic dumpiness, and extending the forefinger of her right hand till it reached an alarming propinquity to that lady's nose. 'No rules! do you tell me I've no rules! Me! that cooked in the first families for fifteen years, and always gin satisfaction, to be told by such as you that I hain't no rules!'
'Thus far had Mudlaw proceeded, and I know not to what length she would have allowed herself to go, and had not the sudden entrance of Col. Philpot interrupted her. He being a person of whom she stood somewhat in awe, particularly just at this time, she broke off in the midst of her tirade, and casting a look of ineffable disgust at Mrs. Darling, retreated to her own dominions, to vent her fury on poor Peggy, who had done every thing wrong during her absence.
